

Note: the link <http://wikipedia.org/wiki/Slackware> does not have to be changed in the page. It will automatically re-direct to the Wiki language of your own browser.

Meaning, for you <http://wikipedia.org/wiki/Slackware> will change to <https://es.wikipedia.org/wiki/Slackware> while for me, that same starting link will change to <https://nl.wikipedia.org/wiki/Slackware>

I suspected this might be the case and even tested it myself, however, my browser does not redirect me to the proper localization. I don't know what Wikipedia uses to redirect users. I have the HTTPS Everywhere add-on enabled and I'm using the English localization of Mozilla Firefox with [en] and [en-us] set under Languages. I figured it was safer to add a direct link just in case. — Gerardo Zamudio 2012/08/26 19:40
